

Worth Careful Thought

Do you read the label to know whether your baking powder is made from cream of tartar or, on the other hand, from alum or phosphate?

Royal Baking Powder is made from cream of tartar, derived from grapes, and adds to the food only wholesome qualities.

Other baking powders contain alum or phosphate, both of mineral origin, and used as substitutes for cream of tartar because of their cheapness.

Never sacrifice quality and healthfulness for low price.

tell the truth, and to reward an official who has been obedient to the dictates of his own conscience, every citizen should vote for Charles Evans Hughes.

SHERIFF

D. W. Naill is going to receive a lot of Democratic votes at the coming election. There is no question but that either a Republican or a Democrat will be elected to the office of sheriff. This office is a most important one and the influence of the incumbent directly affects every office to be filled from the president down to road overseer. The Democrats have had this office long enough and it is now the Republican's turn. For the Republican candidate for that office a particularly good man has been selected. Dave Naill is clean, honest and will make a model officer. He has had many years of experience in handling law breakers and can be depended upon to do his duty every time. Herington, his home town, will give him an overwhelming majority and if the Republicans in other parts of the county will do their duty he will be easily elected.

Remember it will be either a Democrat or a Republican who will be elected, and every Republican should vote for the Republican nominee, David W. Naill.

Republicans, don't throw your vote away or help elect a Democrat to this important office.

HOW FREE TRADE WORKS

The following letter from Congressman R. R. Rees to Charles M. Harger, Republican candidate for congress, gives some real facts on the working of free trade:

"Anahem, Calif., Oct. 18.—Dear Mr. Harger: At election time my heart turns to Kansas and my interest in Kansas men and Kansas things. Often have I spoken for protection in the old Fifth district, but I was speaking then only of the things I believed. I should like now to talk about some of the things I know.

"Since coming to California I became a grower of walnuts and oranges. We produce in this country about 40 per cent of the walnuts consumed; the other 60 per cent are imported mainly from France and Korea. With adequate protection, we could produce all the nuts this country could consume and add millions to the export. But instead of growing in this part of the state, many of the groves are being cut down, because the markets are always more or less demoralized by the great shiploads of nuts from Europe and Asia that are dumped on our markets.

"Since the war, however, the supply while about as great as ever, has a perilous time getting here, and the trade does not rely much on it, so we are now getting 15 1/2 cents a pound for No. 1 nuts, which is a fairly reasonable price. If these prices would continue the industry would prosper, but we all realize that after the war is over, down will go the prices unless we are given protection, for the people in Europe will feel too poor to eat walnuts—they will ship them all over here.

"Two years ago my neighbor cut down 10 acres of walnuts and planted lemons in their place. He had cared for these walnuts about 10 years and they were just beginning to produce nicely, but he thought lemons would pay better. The following year the bottom fell out of the lemon market. The tariff reduction had got in its work and the shippers could not sell their lemons for enough to pay the freight and expenses of marketing. My friend came to me and asked me what I thought he had better do about that lemon orchard. He thought of re-budding to Valencia oranges. I advised him to hold fast to the lemons because in my judgment, after sober second thought, the good sense of the country would return the Republican party to power and restore the former protective duty. This year, owing to the activity of the U-boats, the lemons did not reach New York like they formerly did, and the price of lemons soared, and the growers are making a good profit.

"With a sane protection we could produce all the oranges and lemons and nuts the country could consume, and could sell them so the consumer could get them at more reasonable prices than they are paying now, and at the same time we would get more. The jobbers could not come around at marketing time and tell us of the great crop abroad and scare us into selling for less than living prices.

"We have become too dependent upon Europe. Our supply of potash has hitherto been imported from Germany. We could produce it in this country were we prepared, but who will go to the expense of putting up a plant if they have to face rutinous competition when the war is over?

"Here is hoping that you will be elected in November and that we will have a Republican victory throughout the nation.

"Sincerely yours,

SPEAKING OF SERVICE

Marysville News: Any man who can be elected to congress from this district—or for that matter, from almost any district—will do his best to look after the interest of his constituents in all local matters, such as pension claims and other departmental matters. These matters are non-political and few congressmen neglect them. It is their duty to do these things and few congressmen stoop to the low degree of demanding the votes of their constituents as reward for this service. This aid is due to members of all parties and generally is freely given as a matter of right. You can get that kind of help just as effectively from a Republican congressman as from a Democrat, or vice versa. In this district the people have always had this service, whether their congressman was Republican or Democrat. The difference which does effect the voters of the district is the political difference when it comes to legislative matters. A Republican will vote for legislation along Republican lines and will uphold the policies of a Republican president. A Democrat will vote for Democratic legislative policies and will do the bidding of a Democratic president. If a Republican president is elected and a Democratic congressman is elected from this district, the congressman will do all in his power to embarrass the president and prevent him from having his policies enacted into law. In addition to this, the Democrats are still exercising their old methods of controlling the votes of their congressmen through the iron-bound rules of a caucus. The important matters of legislation are not adopted by the freely expressed will of a majority of all the members of congress. The matters are submitted to a Democratic caucus and the majority vote of this caucus—which is always controlled by the Democrats of the south—is the iron-bound rule which controls the solid party vote in congress. The Democrat who rebels against the rule of caucus loses his standing and influence with his party and the administration. The result of caucus rule is that on all party matters the vote of a Kansas Democrat is absolutely controlled by the votes of the southern Democratic congressmen. When they tell him to vote for free trade on the products of the northern farmer and for protection for the rice, cotton, sweet potatoes, peanuts, etc., of the south he has to obey. What is the remedy? The remedy is to vote for Charles M. Harger for congress.

ed or rejected is not apt to be hostile to the Wilson administration. Thousands of these claims are being held up in an endeavor by Commissioner Saltzger, or his assistants, to aid Wilson's campaign.

It would be hard to find a man who is better qualified for probate judge than John C. Royer, the Republican candidate for that office. Even if his opponent was not running for a third term Royer would be the man for the place. From every standpoint he is exceptionally well qualified for the position he seeks, and after he is elected he will continue to be the same quiet, unassuming gentleman that he now is. No brag or bluster about John Royer and no amount of success will turn his head. He is conducting his campaign in a straightforward manner and those who cast their votes for him will ever have cause for regret or have to apologize for any of his acts. He will be courteous, accommodating and efficient which is all that can be asked of any official. Vote for him.

PENSIONS HELD UP

Large numbers of Civil war, Spanish-American war and Philippine war veterans throughout the country who have applied for pensions, or for increases in pensions, and who are wondering why they have not received a reply to their applications should know that the pension office is holding up notices of rejections of applications. The notices no doubt will be sent out after the November election.

For about two months the pension office has failed to send notices of rejections of applications for pensions. This is a political scheme because a veteran whose pension is pending and who does not know whether it will be allowed

"He kept us out of war" slogan is proving to be a "joker" to the Democrats.

This is a Republican year and the Republicans should not stray after strange gods.

In the meantime the high cost of living mounts higher and higher. "Thank God for Wilson!"

Every candidate on the Republican ticket is entitled to the support of all voters. Give them your vote.

Practically every southern orator is now engaged in making campaign speeches in the north for the Democratic ticket. From which it is inferred that the southern Republicans are considered to be too thoroughly intimidated to be at all dangerous.

"President Wilson certainly would be a very unhappy man if he could realize that over 300,000 lives had been lost and more than a billion of dollars worth of property destroyed exclusively on account of his blunders in the Mexican policy," writes Enrique C. Reel, former Mexican ambassador to Washington, to his cousin, Henry M. Creel, of North Dakota. Former Ambassador Creel may watch the mails for a note from the white house explaining the beauties of watchful waiting.

The office of county superintendent is one that is particularly close to the rural schools of the county and the incumbent of that position in a large measure makes or mars the efficiency of the country schools. Miss Gracelee Woolverton, the present superintendent by appointment and the Republican candidate, is particularly fitted for the position. She is giving the best of satisfaction in her superintendency of the schools, knows their needs as she has taught successfully for several years in the rural districts. To retain her in that position would seem but right and proper. That she has ability, energy and efficiency is denied by no one and her election is a foregone conclusion. Miss Gracelee Woolverton will appreciate your vote and do her very best to justify the confidence placed in her by the voters should she be elected.

HUGHES' BOLD STAND

Governor Hughes is going after the Wilson administration with sledge-hammer blows, and his audiences are exhibiting a responsiveness and enthusiasm highly gratifying to the Republican managers. Referring to the Adamson wage-increase law, Mr. Hughes said: "It was nothing more than a measure to fix wages, and as a measure to fix wages it must be judged. If as such as measure it was justified, it needs no further excuse. We are not concerned with anything that was said of the judgment of society with respect to an eight-hour work day. There is plainly no judgment of society on the increase of wages this bill requires. The phrase, 'eight-hour day' is apparently used to tickle the public ear, in order to establish something quite different." And again: "The Adamson bill is a force bill. It was legislation without inquiry, without knowledge. The demand by the administration for such legislation as the price of peace was a humiliating spectacle. It was not only a serious misuse of official authority but a deplorable abdication of moral authority."

NO WAR WITH HUGHES

Nothing can be more absurd than to say that if Mr. Hughes is elected president he will strive to get us into a war. In the first place no president has a right to declare war or to claim credit for keeping us out of war. The matter is in the hands of congress, not with the president. In the second place, Mr. Hughes stands for the organization of peace. Read his acceptance speech and you will find that, although he believes in the nation's preparedness, he does not believe in that militarism which in Europe has oppressed the taxpayer and created a false patriotism by teaching nations to regard each other as foes instead of friends.

In Mr. Hughes we find a practical statesman, who is in favor of international peace and who will undoubtedly put forth every effort possible in a practical manner to bring about a time when nations shall no longer be permitted to engage in warfare and when all men shall be allowed to pursue their many different peaceful vocations "without a thought of interruption by the ravages of war and be enabled peaceably to take possession of land and water and air and all the forces to be found in them and make them minister to human life."

The record of Mr. Hughes, before he was governor of New York, in the investigation of the New York Gas company, resulting in reduced rates; in the investigation of the insurance cases, resulting in beneficial legislation, and his fearlessness, judgment and fairness after he became governor, make him a candidate in whom we can have absolute confidence because, by his record, we are led to believe that, under all circumstances, he will do what he thinks and knows to be right.

If it is proper to reward fidelity to the interests of the public, to reward a man who is not afraid to
